

Systems Workshop

Every organisation needs organisation-wide systems. Systems help managers not to have to “reinvent the wheel” in their management. They help people to be aligned to your strategy, mission and goals. Systems help people speak the same language across the organisation and provide consistency of behaviour across the organisation. They also give the framework for bringing consistent policy throughout the organisation

- Length: 1 or 2 days
- Who should attend: middle managers and higher potential front-line managers

Key areas of the workshop

- Systems thinking
- Developing systems that don't inhibit common sense
- Communication systems
- Management information Systems
- Establishing policies and procedures that don't get in the way of getting the job done
- Decision making systems
- Performance management systems
- Administration and reporting systems
